FLOOR DEBATE

January 18, 2002 LB 824

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...and turn their back on the principles they spent all that time talking about during discussion of this bill and Senator Pedersen's bill the other day? It's reprehensible, they say, to engage in fetal cell research because you are destroying human beings in order to do so, but now Senator Foley is in favor of destruction of other human beings, and my other pro-life colleagues. Now, am I going to condemn them in a moral sense? That's not my job. I'm dealing with politics here and they injected those kind of things into the political process, and anything that comes into this process. I'm going to deal with it. I call...

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...this my polygraph amendment.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Senator Chambers, you can continue on in your closing, if you'd like.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Mr. President. Why do I call it a polygraph amendment? Because I am compelling these people to show where they are and what they are. The Catholic Church did a lot of condemning, of destroying embryos, as they call it, in order to procure certain cells from those embryos to be used in research. So I know the Catholic Church's position, as they've declared it. Now, maybe the church is practicing moral relativism also. And in the same way that the pope told these crusaders, if you fight under the flag of the church and the cross you can commit what would ordinarily be a crime and it's not a crime; you can murder, you can rape, you can commit pillage, you can steal and it's not a crime; you're given a blanket pardon, prospectively, because you're doing it for the church. So maybe the church has said you can vote against an amendment that would protect more human life in order to achieve a political end, and that's fine because it lends credence to everything that I've been saying about the history of the church and its present posture, and that will be reflected by its members today, those members who have been saying that a human
